

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many have contributed toward the gathering of material for this History; have turned back pages in their own lives or those of their friends and brought forth stories of rare historical value, and always in a spirit of friendly interest and cooperation. The list is too long for special mention, but the following brief statement, at least should be made.

The first to suggest the writing of this History was Judge Bradfield and through the almost five years of its preparation has given unstintingly from his rich storehouse of historical data, and from start to finish has stood ready with counsel and advice of incalculable value; and at the last was the first to read and approve the finished manuscript.

J. M. B. Petrikin, whose connection with the development of Greeley and Weld county dates back almost to the beginning, has given dependable information as well as valuable help along other lines.

H. E. Green, manager of radio station KFKA, gave a radio period every Thursday evening from July 1935 to November 1936—16 months—for stories that were to constitute the chapters of this book.

From the College of Education much help has been received. First Miss Frances Tobey read the whole manuscript and gave friendly criticism that was immeasurably helpful. President Frasier and John Henry Shaw of the department of Journalism read Chapter 13 and gave approval. The early historical chapters were submitted to the department of Social Science and History under Dr. Dickerson, read by Dr. Peake and approved. The whole manuscript was read by George Irvin of the department of Teacher Placement and by him recommended to the Chamber of Commerce, in which body he was chairman of the literary department.

Representing the public schools were superintendents both past and present. W. S. Hunt, present superintendent, read the entire manuscript and gave encouraging endorsement. Jerre Moreland and Carl Carlson in the earlier stages helped materially to give form and system to the work. C. C. Crea, assistant to the present superintendent gave help all the way from the oldest files to the newest information. H. D. Eldridge, superintendent of District No. 6, Greeley, gave a complete summary of present school activities.

Of allied educational institutions, both College and City libraries have given of their best. In the work of earlier research when most of the historical material was being gathered, Librarian Carter of the College and Miss Helen Thomas of the City library, with her able corp of assistants, never failed to locate the most prolific sources of information; and, later, the College under Dr. Rugg and the City under Hamilton Hatfield were equal to all calls made upon them.

The Meeker Memorial Museum has yielded facts concerning early colonial days and the people who first met desert conditions and as no other could; first under A. B. Copeland and, later George Hodgson as curator.

In addition to these general sources should be added the personal assistance given by individuals. Robert Hanna, almost the whole of whose life has been spent in Weld county, has enthusiastically encouraged the preservation of records that he believes should never be lost. Walter Morrison, present county clerk and recorder, has made the files of his office freely available. Frank S. Green has given many legal facts concerning early organization, especially along temperance lines. Mrs. Grace Allen has given valuable literary as well as historical criticism. Miss Psyche Boyd, at the very beginning gave valuable help in the book written by her father, David Boyd, History of Greeley and Weld County, which book stands unrivaled in historical facts and documents. Mrs. Ethel Dowell and Mrs. Mildred Fralick loaned the rare old diaries of their father, Oliver Howard. Postmaster Redman gave much valuable data concerning the towns and Post Offices of the county. Tracy Cameron drew all the maps. Mr. and Mrs. George Hodgson have given freely of the hospitality of their home and the service of their car, besides unfailing comfort and encouragement. And last, also first and all the time has been the help given by Mrs. Bessie Carlson, whose faith has been as a lodestar, pointing always to ultimate success.
